

Oracle Abuse 101

HI,

You have probably heard me use the term “Oracle abuse.” I talk about it a lot. But, you may not be sure what that is. Does this sound familiar? You go to your Oracle deck with a question about a specific situation. You choose a card. You don't like the card, so you slide it back in and choose another one. Doing this all the time, well, that's Oracle abuse.

When we do this, we are telling the Universe to tell us what we want to hear, rather than what is for our highest good and what we need to hear.

Another form of Oracle abuse is asking about the same thing over and over and over...

Some people get addicted to readings. They are seeking the answers that they want rather than genuine guidance. They are obsessing over a situation (usually a relationship).

The more you engage this way, the more you give your power away. You're sending the message that you don't trust the guidance from the Universe. The cards will become tricksters and stop giving clear answers.

What you need to know is that Oracle abuse is normal, we've all done it- even me! And it can be controlled. Learn to recognize the signs:

- Are you putting cards back that you don't like?
- Are you asking about the same situation over and over?
- Are you coming to the cards fearful and attached to a certain outcome?

When you catch yourself in a cycle of Oracle abuse, it's best to take a break and stop working with them for a bit. Also, remember to approach in a neutral state. Say a prayer and meditate before working with the cards. You can always download one of my meditations!

So, remember, seeking guidance from the Universe is great. Seeking only the guidance you want to hear, well that's Oracle abuse.

Until next time,

Colette
